- Child Growth & Development

The Journey of Childhood: An Overview

This is an exciting and wonderful time to study child development! Child development is a part of human development. It spans the first two decades of life. The study of child development describes and explains the processes of growth and changes that take place from conception to childhood and adolescence. It gives an understanding of how children grow and change biologically, cognitively, socially, emotionally, behaviorally, and how their language progresses as they mature. Each child's developmental journey is unique! There is tremendous amount diversity in children's development and there are many similarities too!

Children are endlessly fascinating! In children, we have the making of ourselves. While observing them, we get glimpses of ourselves. This course is about our history; it is a story of our lives. It helps us understand how we became the way we are and why we are the way we are now. Whether you plan to work with children or not, this course will be useful to all students!

From genetics to culture – the study of child development explains what influences children as they move on in life. Contemporary knowledge generated in fields of human development, psychology, genetics, neuroscience and cultural studies has enhanced our understanding of what development is all about, and how and why it happens. Research in neuroscience is unraveling the mysteries of the brain and throwing new light in understanding Autism, ADHD etc.

Today's children are a part of the digital generation! The digital and social media are changing the culture of societies. The computer and the cell phone with their various applications have a great impact on the lives of children and their education. In this course, we will discuss what is happening today!

Child growth and development (CD1) includes child development theories. The term development is a theoretical construct. In this class, we will travel through time, looking at the contributions of many philosophers and scholars from the past to the present – from the psychological insights of Sigmund Freud, Erik Erikson, Jean Piaget, John Watson, B. F. Skinner, and Lev Vygotsky, to the contributions of modern scholars like Urie Bronfenbrenner, Albert Bandura, Abraham Maslow, Howard Gardner and many others. Technically, their theories are their ideas and perspectives. They reflect the culture and scientific progress during their time period. Some of the concepts may be controversial to you. However, their theories and concepts have made significant contributions to our understanding of human development. Child development theories expand our knowledge and enable us to think about childhood and adolescence from a wider perspective.

In class discussions you are encouraged to express your viewpoints and give examples. Critical thinking is required. Reading, reflecting and relating the subject matter to your own experiences will make this course meaningful and easier to remember.

I sincerely hope that after taking this course, you will have a broader understanding of how children grow and develop with an awareness of the diversities and similarities in children's development! Together, we can have a meaningful teaching-learning experience!

✓ To succeed in this class → Preview, Read, Reflect, Review, Repeat!

✓ There is no shortcut to success but hard work!

*Experience is not what happens to you!
Experience is what you do with what happens to you!*

~Aldous Huxley

The function of education is to teach one to think intensively and to think critically... Intelligence plus character - that is the goal of true education."

It is through good education that all the good in the world arises. ~ Immanuel Kant
