This is a good general textbook and is great to have if you plan to take art 109 as well. You may also find used-copies online.

Please note this is the up-dated and detailed syllabus which you need to read carefully and print.

Course Description:

Art 105 considers the visual arts of South and South East and West Asia, the Indus Valley, China, Japan and Korea in relation to their history, religion and general culture. We will focus on the social as well as religious, political and philosophical contexts of art as a way of understanding the history of art as a broad cultural phenomenon greatly affecting our way of looking at the world.

My goal as your instructor is to share my knowledge and passion about the topics and the art objects in a supportive and enjoyable environment. So let's not get frustrated and overwhelmed if the first couple of weeks seem a bit overwhelming. This might be your first online course in Canvas and navigating it smoothly could take couple of days but be patient and it will get easier. I am here to help you make this learning experience a memorable and a fun one :)

I am also going to schedule an optional Museum-Day in LACMA, Los Angeles County Museum of Art, whence we can go through the South and Southeast Asian Collection together, discuss artifacts and exchange ideas. I will post more details, this will most probably occur in late October, depending on the Museum availability.

SLO (Student Learning Outcomes):

1. We will identify, examine and assess representative works of art and architecture from the art historical periods covered in this course employing appropriate art historical terminology and in regards to the social, economic, political and philosophical influences on art and architecture in Asia.
2. Analyze works of art and architecture from Asia in terms of aesthetic responsiveness, historical context and cultural values

Minimum Technology Requirements:

Access to a computer with a MS word Document installed, high speed or wire-less is highly recommended.

Please carefully review the Canvas system requirements: See below. Make sure you have configured your computer correctly before the course starts.

Attendance and Participation Policy:

Our class is an online class, which means that we will not face-to-face. However, there will be plenty of contact through discussions, chat-room and other activities. Please keep in mind that to be successful in this class you need to actively participate and be a collaborative student. This will require you to log in to the class site 3-4 times a week and you should be prepared to spend at least 9 hours per week working on the course material. Since all the material is provided in the modules, there is no need to consult outside sources. There is no mandatory amount of time you need to be 'logged-in'.

Throughout the week, I log in at the same time as you do. So, keep in mind, that though you may not meet me in person, I am always a click away to help you.

Communication and Contact with the Professor:

By far the best way to reach me is through the Private Message in Canvas site. Once enrolled in class, please keep in mind, that I may not be able to respond to you if you send an email to my campus email -- lavasanm@lamission.edu account in a timely manner. Please try Not to send messages to my campus email, as I may not see them in time to address your questions or concerns immediately.

I will respond to your emails within a 24 hours window but I will try my best to answer as soon as possible. Private Messages sent on a Friday afternoon will be answered by or on Monday.

I will be communicating to you through Announcements. Please review the announcements very carefully for important information.

Course Expectations:

Our class is a community. We all have the same objective: to learn! It is normal for online students to feel isolated at times, but it is important to remember that you are not alone. I need each of you to approach our online class with a great attitude and willingness to help and motivate each other. Many problems and questions can be resolved by asking a fellow student. I am always here to help you, but I truly believe your experience will be more fulfilling if you establish a good level of communication with your fellow students. The subject of our first discussion forum is an introduction where we will share some things about ourselves. Use this introductory exercise as a way to get to know each other, an icebreaker, if you wish. Is there a student in the course with whom you have something in common? Let them know and share, communicate and build a rapport. Let's work together to make this semester a great one for everyone!

Let's keep the following "ground rules" in mind when beginning this course:

- I recommend you upload a picture of yourself in your Canvas account and keep it visible to class participants throughout the entire semester.
- Participation in discussion forums assignments is
- Spend time learning how to navigate in your course management
- Check the announcements
- Address technical problems
- No emailed assignments are allowed. Assignments must be submitted in Canvas correctly in order to receive a grade. No exceptions!
- If you are planning to do the extra-credit museum report and you are not in the greater Los Angeles area, you need to inform me at the beginning of the course and together we'll find an appropriate local museum for you to visit in order to complete the assignment.

Quizzes: There will be several "open-book", not-timed quizzes, one for each module except for the last module. Each week, you will have a quiz on the Module we are covering--except for the week of Thanksgiving. The quizzes are not timed but they have a deadline to submit. They are due before midnight on Sundays.

This will give you plenty of time to carefully take the quizzes while studying the Modules. In rare cases, I may change the deadlines. But, that is very unlikely!

There will be true/false, matching and multiple-choice questions, all drawing on factual information in assigned websites. Also, please check the value point for each question in all the quizzes. If a question has 5 points, it means it has more than one correct answer. You can treat the quizzes like guided reading, if you like, read with the quiz open answer the questions as you encounter the facts on the assigned websites. (Use two browsers if you do this-- Firefox for Canvas, and Internet Explorer or Safari for the websites.)

Discussions: The discussions are the heart of the course, the place you practice critical thinking most directly. You will post at least two times for each module, and will have the opportunity to read what others have posted.

Make sure you pay attention to the number of the Discussions required each week. You can find this information at the very last section of each Module. For example, you may see 5 Discussions due for one module, remember I will give you options to choose the topics and you are NOT required to answer all of them. So, please read the last section of each Module very carefully.

I will not post very often--generally only if issues of fact arise. Usually, there will be three topics to respond to in each module, except for the last module. I'll almost always be asking you to point out something you can see in an image. Here are important things to remember when participating in discussions:

- Ask a question that generates more discussion
- Provide a statement of clarification
- Provide a point of view with rationale
- Challenge a point of discussion while providing specific examples
- Make relationship between one or more points of the discussion

- Participation is an opportunity for me to see what you have learned and for you to demonstrate your comprehension of the material. Substantive discussion should include the use of:

-Relevant vocabulary words, correct terminology, though I am not looking for 'a literary masterpiece', remember you are sharing your thoughts, opinions and formulated statements in a professional academic environment. Feel at ease expressing yourself. I will not penalize for minor grammar or spellings of foreign names.

-Specific examples and appropriate documentation

-Concepts from the modules demonstrating a command of the subject matter

Please note that a simple, “I agree,” “I like it when ...,” or any sort of one liner does not count as a substantive participation.

Online Object Comparison:

For this assignment, you need to choose and study an object from a museum's website online and answer certain questions. There are three questions in this assignment. Keep in mind that this selected object should be related to the civilizations, time-periods or themes we have discussed in class. More details will be provided in class along with instructions and exact deadline. You will have few weeks to complete this after it opens. This assignment is worth 90 points.

Museum Short Report Extra-Credit: I will assign two objects/topics related and/or from a local museum here in Los Angeles. You will then need to choose one topic/object only and write a report. More details will be announced by the fourth week of class. If you have never written a museum report, no need to panic. You are here to learn and I am here to help you. Please keep in mind, that in order to succeed in writing your report you need to physically visit the assigned museum on your own. I encourage you to go with a classmate or a friend from this class. You will email me this report here in Canvas, with images, and proof of Museum attending. No Google Docs will be accepted, make sure you send it as a Doc. attachment to your email. The exact dead- line will be announced in Canvas course shell. In addition, you could take the Museum report test and answer the questions under Quizzes. You will get extra points for doing this as well. I strongly encourage you plan to visit the museum as soon as I announce the objects/topics.

Grading Scale:

I may have to change the grading scale a bit but that is unlikely. The scale below should give you an idea of how percentages and break-downs work. Please look at your total accumulated points at the end of the term and not the percentages. Extra credits will only have an impact on your points if you decide to complete them.

A more than 700 points

B 580-699 points

C 450-579 points

D 449-250 points

F 249 or fewer points
