I. Course Objectives

The course examines major sociological concepts and theories in classical and contemporary sociology. These perspectives are structural-functionalist, social conflict, and symbolic interactionist, as well as more modern theories like rational choice (referred to as exchange theory) and feminist theories. These theories explore how societies and the individuals within them operate and how social forces shape group and individual behavior in the context of various social institutions related to concepts like economic and political changes, racial and ethnic relations, socioeconomic class and inequality, crime and justice, family, culture, gender, and social change and more. In this attempt, the course links the relationships between individuals (micro levels), and societies including global trends (macro levels) and develops a sociological imagination. The course also develops a capacity for collaborative learning, reading, writing, and critical thinking.

Transfer credit: CSU; UC

II. Learning Outcome Objectives

- To apply the sociological perspectives to real life
- To develop sociological imagination
- To describe the differences between sociology and other academic disciplines
- To examine the nature and significance of culture in people’s lives
- To explain what sociology is and the kinds of work professional sociologists do
- To explain social structure and how these structures shape society and social experiences
- To describe the process of socialization and assess its importance in understanding human behavior

V. Class Rules

Timely attendance is required. Chronic tardiness or absences will be to your disadvantage. Extra credit (if time permits to offer) for students with disruptive behavior, unexplained tardiness and absences will not be counted in the final grade. If you have to leave early, please have the courtesy to inform me ahead of the time. I also will drop students with excessive unexplained absences.

Communication devices such as cell phones must be turned off during these shared hours. If a student is using the phone, I will ask the student to leave the classroom. Other devices, like headsets, computers, tape recording, videotaping and etc. are also not allowed in my classroom.

Contacting me through email is a better option. I check my phone messages only when I am in campus. So I may see you before getting the message. But, I do check my emails off campus once a week.

Disruption such as side conversations or other forms of rudeness will not be tolerated. Student will be asked to leave the classroom. I may drop the student if disruption continues after the first verbal warning.

Food is not allowed in the classrooms.

Trash must not be left behind. Please clean after yourself.

Visitors are not allowed in the classroom.

Pick-up your graded coursework. Unclaimed work will be shredded the day after the semester ends.

VI. Administrative Rules

Adding the class requires paperwork or online actions. For details please check with the Admissions and Records office.

Dropping the class also requires paperwork or online action. Talk to me first, and then proceed before the drop deadline. Failure to withdraw/drop from the course BY DEADLINE will result in an unwanted grade. Grades stay with you for the rest of your academic career. It is your responsibility to prevent the unwanted grade before it is recorded. However, I will drop those who do not show up the first session. This will open room for students on waiting list.

VII. Work Ethics, Projects & Exams

To do well you are expected to take all the exams, keep up with the required assigned readings and writings, be prepared to discuss the content, and participate in all group activities.

Reading is your career. A college student is expected to read at least eight hours a week for this course. You are responsible for all the content of assigned chapters. Read assigned chapters prior to class attendance so that you will be able to engage in the subject matter.

Study group is helpful and I encourage you to form a small study group in which you can collaborate and brainstorm with other students.

Participation in class at large or small group discussion is a must and will help you better conceptualize the course content. Participation means attentive listening as well as contributing to discussions with respect for each other.

Late work is not accepted unless there are truly exceptional circumstances. Even under special circumstances, the maximum delay is one week, and it will cost you 2 points a day.

Plagiarism means using someone else's spoken or written ideas or words as one's own. Using someone's idea/words is unethical, unless, the ideas are used with a proper method of acknowledgement. You must cite and quote. Any type of plagiarism or cheating on an exam(s) or assignment(s) will lead to a zero grade and disciplinary action. This means being dropped from the course and college.

Writing is expected to be of college quality. If you have difficulty with your written assignments, seek help in the Writing Lab before turning in your work.

VIII. Projects & Exams

Exams consist of multiple-choice questions assessing your understanding of concepts and theories covered in your textbook readings. Exams are not accumulative. You will be tested on 3 or 4 chapters at a time adding up to a maximum of 180 points. Do not miss exams because there is no make-up exam, unless there are special circumstances for which you must have evidence.

In-class assignments add up to 30 points and cannot be made up if missed. These exercises or discussions maybe followed by collective or individual submissions.

Group presentation is for 20 points. This is an opportunity to explore and teach your classmates a sociological topic that is not covered or fully addressed due to time constraints. For this project, you will receive a handout detailing the expectation. It is your responsibility to follow through with deadlines and establish contact with your group members. See the handout online. If you miss the presentation, I may not be able to reschedule you because of time constraints.

Written work/research paper is for 30 points. For this paper you will be asked to discuss and apply several sociological concepts/theories to the content of your topic. See the handout and follow through with the deadline.

IX. Grade Information:

Exams	180
In-class assignments	30
Group presentation	20
Research paper	30
Total points required	260

NOTE:

- The final grade is based on all projects and exams and it adds to a total of 260 points.
- You can calculate your grade at any given time during the semester length. Simply divide the total points earned by the total possible points you could have earned up to that point in the term (exclude extra credits-if any).

Grading Scale:

260 - 234 points	100%-90%=A range = Excellent
233 - 208 points	90%-80%=B range = Above Average
207 - 182 points	80%-70%=C range = Average
181 - 156 points	70%-60%=D range = Below Average
