College Reading and Composition I

This is the first freshman composition course that meets requirements for the BA at four-year colleges and universities. This course develops proficiency in critical reading and writing through the application of the principles of rhetoric and the techniques of critical thinking. Students will write expository essays based on college-level readings. Emphasis is placed on the research paper.

The Weekend College classes combine video lessons and online activities with weekend class meetings. You should complete all three components to successfully pass the class. The course requirements are in the online syllabus. If you have questions contact your instructor via email or by telephone during their office hours listed above.

Getting Started

Even though you do not meet with your instructor until the first weekend after the semester begins, your class begins on April 7, 2008. Follow the checklist below to get started in your class now.

1. Choose a Campus

Select the campus to attend your weekend class and make note of its time and location.

2. Buy Your Books

The back of this page lists the required and recommend books for your course. Buy your books as soon as possible so that you can get started on your assigned readings. Textbooks can be purchased at City, Southwest, Mission, Valley, and Pierce Colleges or from most online bookstores.

3. Log In

The class website opens April 7, log in and read your course syllabus. It will list all assignments and quizzes times and due dates. You can find log-in instructions on the last page of this letter.

4. Email Your Instructor

Once you have logged in, email your instructor and let her know that you have successfully logged in to the class website.

5. Plan Your Schedule

Weekend College courses are fast paced—covering a lot of material in a short period of time. At a minimum, you can expect to spend 10 to 12 hours per week completing the assignments. Schedule time in advance for reading the textbooks, watching the video episodes, and completing the online assignments. If you plan to watch or record the videos on the educational cable channel LA 36, also note those times and set your Tivo or DVD recorder in advance. You can find the broadcast schedules on the back of this page.

Dear Students:

Welcome to the Spring Session B of English 101, beginning 7 April 2008. I hope you'll enjoy this course and at the end of it, will be able to say that you have learned all the valuable skills that English 101 is designed to teach. Those skills will be useful to you throughout your academic years and beyond--in your professional and personal life--long after English 101 is over.

What can you expect from the course? Well, you'll learn how to:

- read challenging college-level material, all of it developing your critical thinking skills and ability to analyze, interpret, explain, and evaluate the persuasiveness of arguments;
- write academic essays for which you devise writing strategies, then draft, revise, edit, and proof-read your work;
- research a topic using electronic and other resources at Mission College's library--all without leaving your home computer--learning Modern Language Association citation and documentation format;
- respond critically and productively to the work of others in peer groups in class and on the website.

The DVDs for the course, "The Writer's Circle," will guide you through the process of writing by demonstrating rhetorical modes, showing you how to distinguish different styles of English and telling you how to use them in appropriate contexts. In each DVD segment, you'll see guest speakers who have years of research, writing, and teaching experience discussing approaches to writing, and you'll see students like you who face writing situations that are common in college. So you can tell that English 101 will be a special course for you. It's special course for me, too, as I observe your reactions to and hear your thoughts about the important contemporary issues we discuss in classes and on the class website.

Now how can we accomplish all this learning in eight short weeks? Well, we have a superb format established in the textbooks and DVDs combined, and I am here to help, too. Of course, there will be plenty of hard work, but the reward at the end will be worth all the time and effort you devote to the course.

Your success in English 101 is my interest, and to help you to succeed, I encourage you to recognize that the course will make demands on your time. Plan your time wisely before you begin. I'll help with time management, if you like. Buy your books and the DVDs now so you're ready to begin on 7 April 2008. Set aside sufficient time to complete your readings and to view the videos. Don't miss classes; be present each time the class meets so that you won't fall behind.

Here's what to do next: make sure you have the right textbooks, in the right editions. Central to the course are:

- The Composition of Everyday Life: A Guide to Writing, 2nd ed. (This textbook may be available at online bookstores at a better price).
- "The Writer's Circle" DVD series (the complete series is available at Pierce College bookstore and it is not expensive).

I recommend buying:

- The Student Course Guide for the Writer's Circle, a textbook for use with The Composition of Everyday Life. (This is an excellent textbook, designed for use with the DVDs for the course, as well as the main text, making a complete course package)
- A paperback dictionary in a recent edition for use in class.

Once you have read this letter, log in to Etudes-NG and send me a message in the Messages section on the class website to let me know that you are finding your way around and are ready to begin. Week 1, the first week of the course, begins on 7 April and ends on 14 April. There is a Preliminary Assignment on the class website in Assignments; there is also a discussion question in Discussions, so please complete these before our first class session.

You can attend classes at any location and I look forward to meeting you 12/13 April. Until then, see you online ☺

K. Dawson.
Instructor, English 101
