

REMEMBERING

THE ARMENIAN GENOCIDE:

100 YEARS LATER

In 1915 the Armenians faced mass slaughters, deportations, and exterminations by the Turkish government in the Ottoman Empire. Under the cover of World War I, the Ottomans systematically expunged over a million Armenians from their ancestral lands as the world watched almost in silence. To this day, this tragic event in history is unrecognized in some parts of the world, and the Turkish government denies their actions. Thus, the Genocide continues in the consciousness of all Armenians throughout the world. Please join us in commemorating the 100th year of the Armenian Genocide with a chronology walk through history and a presentation on "Orphans of the Armenian Genocide: The Untold Story of How They Were Saved".
